Q&A

Macleans' editor and publisher
Ken Whyte

Q Why would you want to edit Macleans's?

A Well you know, I've always wanted to. After the Sherwood Park News, my first real job was Alberta Report, which was a newsweekly and always considered itself competitive with Macleans's, though Macleans's was obviously in an entirely different league.

CIRC WATCH

Highlights punch through gloom

For the seventh consecutive year, ABC Fas-Fax data reports that Canadian total paid circulation has declined for the December period, this time by 1.25% overall, the worst performance since 1999.

The biggest damage was inflicted at the newsstand, where Canadian ABC-audited titles took a beating, down 4.23% overall. A staggering 69.2% of ABC-audited titles reported single-copy sales declines.

Even more incredible, French-language titles were pummeled at the newsstand, down 8.78% overall. Plus, a shocking 92% of French titles reported single-copy declines in December.

According to several sources, single-copy sales in Quebec are not as soft as ABC data suggests. Many non-ABC audited titles are picking up the slack at the newsstand.

This may suggest that some of the "old guard" French-language titles are in need of a face-lift in order to compete with new titles, such as La Semaine. This new weekly, published by Claude J. Charron, formerly of 7 Jours, has exploded on the Quebec scene and is now selling more than 200,000 copies per week at $3.95, and is the number-one seller in Quebec, we're told.

Canada's circulators can't take much comfort in the ABC data coming out of the United States. While trends south of the border are not fantastic, total paid circulation was up in both the June 2004 (1%) and December 2004 (0.17%) periods. Not so in Canada, where total paid circulation was down in both the June 2004 (2%) and December 2004 (1.25%) periods.

However, there are always bright spots.

Circ watch

Successful titles in a tough year had one thing in common: teamwork

BY SCOTT BULLOCK

Some of those bright spots include true superstar performances, even when times are tough for many Canadian circulators, thus making this year's consumer marketing achievements that much more spectacular.

Titles turning in eye-popping growth are familiar names such as Flare, on the racks; Canadian Home & Country, when it comes to selling subscriptions; and Canadian Geographic, for total paid performance.

Terri De Rose, vice-president circulation, Transcontinental Media, was modest about CH&C's phenomenal growth. "We just executed the plan. I've been given the resources to work with and I've got great staff helping me." She pointed out she does not grace any copies to prop up the subscription numbers. "Our trade show generates awareness for the magazine brand, our editors are delivering a fantastic magazine, and our newsstand team is doing a fabulous job, all of which gives us great momentum," she explained.

Peter Willson, who heads up the retail team at Rogers, and who has been cleaning up at the Canadian Newsstand Awards year after year, echoed many of De Rose's points regarding teamwork. "From our retail, wholesale, and national distributor partners, right up the ranks of our own senior management, the support for our efforts at retail have been focused and consistent." When asked if more marketing resources are being deployed for Flare, Willson pointed out that "resources are part of it, but our publishing operation has a mindset and an attitude that is pro-retail, and everyone is on board. We're getting great support from our editors, art directors, and publishers, because everyone understands the value that retail sales deliver when pitching consumer-wantedness of the title."

Unlike his Blue Jays, Mr. Rogers believes in stacking his circulation team with star-studded superstars. Just look at a partial list of the talent: Tracey McKinley (20 years experience), Marisa Latini (18 years), Libby Nixon (19 years), Catherine Louvet (11 years), Sylvaine Gombert (14 years), Peter Willson (19 years), Mark Hamill (27 years), Sue Phillips (15 years), Cathy Lewis (20), Cathy Saad (29 years), Ellen L'Écuyer (27 years) and John Matyskiel (30 years).

Twenty-one-year circulation pro Maureen Ogilvie, vice-president consumer marketing and operations at Canadian Geographic, explained the magazine's growth in paid circulation (up 10,690 or 5.04%). "First, there is a commitment from the entire senior management team to increasing paid circulation. We understand the value of paid readers... that increased paid circulation benefits advertising, web traffic, merchandise sales, and furthers the important mandate of the [Royal Canadian Geographical] Society. It's a real team effort. Second, I've been given the resources to market the magazine more aggressively."

When asked about her 33% increase in single-copy sales, Ogilvie pointed out that her marketing budget for newsstand continues to grow year after year, because it works. Specifically, she pointed to the November/December 2004 75th anniversary issue. It had 180 pages—the largest issue ever—was polybagged with a sponsored map, was stickered to push the map, was promoted aggressively at newsstands, and featured an $8.95 cover price (normal price is $6.95). This issue sold 24,323 copies, compared to 20,872 for the prior year, an increase of 16.5%. Plus, as a result of the higher cover price, this issue generated 50% more single-copy revenue. "We're trying to take advantage of opportunities at the planning stage to ensure all possibilities for circulation growth are exploited," said Ogilvie.

Another positive sign continues to be the ability of Canadian publishers to charge readers more for the magazine at newsstand, even in a down period. This bodes well for publishers who invest in the quality of their product and who trust their readers are smart enough to appreciate the value of superior editorial content, words, pictures, paper, page counts, trim size and binding.

What this year's data also suggests is that even excellent circulators are not immune from taking hits to their circulation. Sometimes it may be managed down, sometimes the newsstand just smacks you down. But clearly, magazines that appear to be making investments in retaining or enhancing quality circulation staff, in aggressively marketing their magazines, and taking a team approach that cuts across various disciplines, are producing some truly amazing results.

Cover price

One important metric to gauge the strength of a magazine's circulation is to track cover price. Remember, consumers often spend more for a cheesy greeting card than they do for a 250-page, perfect-bound glossy magazine. While subscription pricing is demonstrably price-sensitive, the evidence suggests that at the newsstand, which is more impulse-driven, consumers are opening their wallets. However, with ever-increasing hordes of new niche titles entering the market every day, with retail shelf space in demand, and with ever more aggressive American magazine launches to contend with, the newsstand battlefield becomes more challenging for hard-pressed circulators.

Of the Canadian ABC titles analyzed in the June 2004 period, 15 or 25.9% took their price up. Of these brave 15, seven magazines (or 46.6%) enjoyed a newsstand unit sales increase. Furthermore, 12 of the 15 (or 80%) enjoyed newsstand revenue increases.

The average cover price increase went from $3.78 to $4.22, a jump of $0.44 cents, or a 12% hike in single-copy price.

The biggest increase was $1, which was adopted by a few confident titles. For Fashion magazine, single-copy sales increased by 2.4% and revenue increased by 31.6%. Western Sportsman also raised cover price by $1 or 20%, with sales increasing by 11.5% and revenues jumping by 34%. BC Outdoors bumped its price by $1 or 20%, but unit sales increased a modest 1.9%. However, newsstand revenues spiked by 22.4%. Canadian Business raised cover price by a conservative $0.25 cents or 6%, but watched sales jump by 24%, and revenues increase by 31.3%, a noteworthy achievement.

TV Guide, suffering at the newsstand for many years now, courageously increased its cover price by 25%, from $1.99 to $2.49, which despite continued slippage in unit sales, resulted in an increase in single-copy revenue of 1.7%.

If you strip out TV Guide and TV Hebdo, 11 of the 13 titles that raised cover price increased their newsstand revenue. Eight of those 11 also increased unit sales.

Three ABC-audited titles lowered their single-copy price. All three suffered massive unit sales erosion. Combined, these titles saw single-copy sales fall by 21.3%, and newsstand revenue drop by 22%.

For the December 2004 period, 26 ABC-audited titles reported higher cover prices. As a group, unit sales were down 4.56%, with 10 or 73% reporting declining unit sales and seven or 27% reporting sales flat or up. However, revenue was up for this group by an average of 1.97%.

Canadian Business continued to prosper at $4.50, and has since increased the price to $4.95, effective with January 2005.

Flare tested a $3.95 price in September, and has since raised the cover price to $4.50 (matching Fashion) effective with the March 2005 issue. Unit sales are up 84.5% for the December 2004 period.

Chatelaine bumped its price from $3.95 to $4.50 effective with its October 2004 issue, while rival Canadian Living is priced at $3.50, also effective with its October 2004 issue.

Of the 13 French-language titles raising prices, 10 or 77% still lost single-copy revenue. Of the 13 English-language titles raising cover prices, 11 or 85% gained single-copy revenue.

Two titles reported lower cover prices. Both saw massive losses in single-copy sales. Cool was down 17.7% and Filles D'Aujourd'hui was down 13.9%.

Twenty-five titles held price, and as a group reported sales down 2.05%.

Subscriptions (ABC)

On the subscription side, relentless price increases from Canada Post continue to place enormous pressure on circulators, not only to sell subscriptions, but to service subscribers profitably. The GST on magazines is sadly still a reality. Increased pressure regarding privacy is straining list rental revenues and threatens telemarketing efforts to renew precious readers. PAP support remains under threat. More and more niche titles compete for the attention of consumers' diminishing leisure time. Circulators arguably have never faced such a perfect storm of negative conditions.

For the December 2004 period, subscription sales were basically flat, on average losing 0.61% from the prior year.

On the plus side, 28 titles or 51.9% of the list posted subscription increases, while 26 or 48.1% reported subscriptions were down. The top five gainers and decliners by volume and percentage are listed on page 8.

Single-copy sales (ABC)

At the newsstand, an ever-increasing list of new magazines, both domestic and import, fight for already crowded and limited retail shelves, with no end in sight. Savvy publishers continue to up the ante with improved cover stock and trim size, more and more vertical specials, and aggressive promotion at point of purchase, thus making competition that much more intense.

Overall, the December 2004 period was even worse than the first half of the year, with ABC-audited Canadian titles reporting single-copy sales off by 4.23%. Plus, only 16 or 30% of the list posted increases, with 36 titles or 70% reporting declines... a brutal result. For the top five winners and decliners by volume and percentage, see the chart on page 8.

Big houses (ABC)

For the December 2004 period, the Rogers team reported subscriptions down by 2.09% overall, while the average for all ABC-audited Canadian titles was 0.61%. Four of seven titles were up.

The Rogers newsstand team, meanwhile, still delivered the goods for the December 2004 period, despite an overall loss of 2.14% in single-copy sales. First of all, four of the seven titles reported increases; plus the increases on Flare (up 84.5%), Maclean's (up 41.1%) and Canadian Business (up 22.65%) were huge. Secondly, Chatelaine's drop-off is in part explained by the spectacular December 2003 issue (which sold over 101,000 copies), making this year's repeat performance in December nearly impossible to replicate. Finally, the overall drop in single-copy sales for ABC-audited titles was 4.23%, so they beat that index too.

At rival Transcon, the subscription folks should take a bow, as they posted excellent results, with an overall increase of 0.61% for the December 2004 period. Fifteen of Transcon's 20 titles, or 75% of the list, posted gains. Very impressive.

Newsstand sales for the December 2004 period improved from the dismal June results. However, as a group, single-copy sales still slid by 4.45%, with 13 titles posting declines. TV Guide and TV

Hebdo were the prime culprits.

This resulted in an overall loss of only 0.29%, statistically insignificant, and shows just how efficiently the circulation group performed as a team.

Finally at TVA, the subscription folks deserve applause, with subs posting an impressive increase of 1.85% overall for December 2004.

They needed it, because single-copy sales performance remained brutal, with an overall loss of 10.55%. All 12 TVA titles posted losses. Because French titles are more newsstand dependent, this resulted in an overall paid circulation decline of 5.17%, compared to a loss of 1.25% for all Canadian ABC-audited titles in the study.

Subscriptions (BPA)

As a group, BPA-audited Canadian titles posted a 2.46% decrease in subscriptions.

Thirty-three magazines, or 62.2% of the titles in the survey, posted gains, while 20 titles, or 37.8%, reported declines.

Gardenwise reported subscriptions up 6,061 units year over year for best performance. Chirp, Cottage Life, Saltscapes, and Dogs in Canada all reported solid gains.

Looked at from the point of view of best per cent gainers on subscriptions, Gardenwise tops the chart of the Top 45 titles, with a 41.3% increase. Performance Auto & Sound and Motomag also deserve kudos.

Single-copy sales (BPA)

The single-copy story for BPA-audited titles was a much more buoyant one than at ABC titles. As a group, single-copy sales are up by 0.64%. Furthermore, 29 titles or 55.7% of the list reported increases, while 23 or 44.3% reported erosion.

Headlining the gainers list is Homemakers, reporting sales up by 6,065. Next best is Photo Life, reporting a gain of 2,520 copies per issue on average. Third best is Madame, which reported sales up by 1,976 copies per issue. Profit and British Columbia Magazine also posted healthy increases.

On the flip side, The Walrus returned to earth after the launch frenzy, posting a decrease of 3,945, but still reporting a very respectable sale of nearly 12,000 copies sold per issue. Explore lost its way with single-copy erosion of 2,314 copies per issue, and Performance Auto & Sound slipped by 2,256 copies per issue on average. (However, take note of Performance Auto & Sound's impressive single-copy sales: more than 50,000 copies sold per issue.)

Looked at from the perspective of biggest per cent gainers, Homemakers leads the parade with an 82.4% improvement. Eastern Woods & Waters posted a 79.3% increase, and Canadian Biker rolled in with a 77.1% increase year over year.

Total paid (BPA)

BPA-audited titles posted an overall decrease in total paid circulation of 2.06%. However, 29 magazines or 54.7% of the list reported net gains in circulation, while 24 titles or 45.3% reported a negative variance year over year.

Gardenwise tops the chart with an overall increase of 5,025 copies on average. Photo Life turned in an impressive performance with an increase of 3,980 (with no sponsored or member subscriptions). Saltscapes takes the third slot with a reported increase of 3,632. Profit and Downhomer turned in nice numbers, too.

In a rough-and-tumble year, our celebrity circulators (and their enlightened publishing teams) should take a collective bow. M
